What above all the colony wants at the present moment is rest -rest until we have worked off Mr Brown's heritage of woe. _ A policy of laissez faire is . $4 $4.50 | not a brilliant one, nor one which recommends itself at first to a Governor anxious 11 12.00 to do some good for the colony he rules; but there are conditions under which it is the wisest course to adopt, and we think these conditions prevail in Hongkong at the . $12 $1.10 present moment. We have a large number of works lying on our hand unfinished; let us finish them before doing anything else. If in the meantime the Government can improve the peace and good order of the 24 2.00 colony and can by any means lighten the public burdens, it will have done all that 8 0.75 can be expected of it. What with the heavy indirect opium tax, which all pay more or less, the heavy rates and other levies, we are grievously overtaxed. A more costly administration than that of Hongkong scarcely exists. The colony only consists of one second-rate town, with a real trade that does not exceed that of Nowcastle or Dundee, and we have to support a huge army of officials, pay an enormous military contribution and maintain an exceptionally large police force. Hongkong, by its situation, has the chance 8 0.75 of rising to be one of the most flourishing cities in the world, but it cannot rise if the burdens laid upon it are made too heavy

Actual observations of a systematic and authentic character have only been made in the case of the habitual consumption of small doses extending overa long period, no such study of the progress of their action has been recorded, only the last stages or the final results have been more or less investigated. > I began this essay by enumerating various evils which are sapping the wealth and power of China. How best to counteract these evils is a problem which our statesmen and politicians are now devoting their zealous endeavours to solve. The measures hitherto proposed involve when compared with that which I have advocated, a larger expenditure at the outset, and do tance, so speedy a return of benefit to the nation. A gold and silver coinage by the Imperial Government would, in all probability, in a very few years be conferring on every province of the empire advantages in comparison with which the initial inconveniences would hardly be worthy of attention. It is of course an essential condition of the success of the mint that it should be organised in such a complete manner as to leave no contingency unprovided for, and thus to ensure its stability and permanence.
